Knew of assassination plot 4 years ago: Goldwater

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said today that he was told four years ago about U.S. plots to assassinate Cuba's Fidel Castro in the early 1960s but took no action to investigate them.

"In the first place, it was merely talk, and second, if it was part of a presidential plan, it wasn't my business to make it public," Goldwater told newsmen.

"I didn't think it would ever come out," said Goldwater, a member of the Senate intelligence committee which recently completed a lengthy investigation of CIA plots to kill Castro and Congolese leader Patrice Lumumba during the early 1960s.

Goldwater refused to reveal how he learned about the plots against Castro except to say it came "from somebody in the know."

Detente can mean safer world, Kissinger says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If Americans let it, detente between the United States and Russia will provide "a safer and saner world." If not, they can expect "chaos," says Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger spoke Monday in answer to questions put to him by a panel of four men chosen as experts in their fields by the Los Angeles Times: Robert Anderson of the Atlantic-Richfield Co.; Edward W. Carter of Carter Hawley Hale Stores, Inc.; Dr. Simon Ramo of TRW, Inc.; and Anthony Day of the Times.

Kissinger said that "although it is no longer predominant" in global affairs, the United States still has a chance to shape the world's future.

"My biggest worry now is what is going on in the United States domestically," he said. "There must be some degree of national unity. These long-term opportunities cannot be realized without it. Whatever progress we have made so far has just been the first mile on a very long road."

Kissinger was scheduled to address a gathering today at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco and then return to Los Angeles for a "Salute to Israel" at the Beverly Hilton Hotel. Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was also scheduled to attend the affair.

Council orders further study of Gearhart petition

By WAYNE LYON

Orval Gearhart Jr., in petitioning for a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Dixon, makes it sound simple.

Gearhart has continually told the City Council, "All we are asking for is to build a sewage lift station, give it to the city in return for the city's guarantee of the 117 gallon per minute capacity of the lift station for five years."

City Council members are not so sure it is that simple. The city and Gearhart have struggled with the wording of the agreement for several months, and after a lengthy discussion at Monday night's Council meeting at City Hall, more rewording is going to be necessary.

Jim G. Burke was the first councilman to raise some objections. "One thing has begun to concern me in the last few days," he stated. "What if something develops that is beyond our control? What if hookups or changes in sewage flow from those already within the city create a situation where we will not be able to supply the 117 gallon capacity for the Gearharts? I don't mind reserving the flow, but if something beyond our control happens and we would not be able to supply the full flow, the city could be open to a lawsuit."

"Gearhart is asking for a guarantee of 117 gallons. How do we know we can guarantee anything? If the city has the intent to fulfill the guarantee, I think it should be good enough. I'm willing to go along with the agreement to guarantee the sewer flow as best we can, but someone already on the line may change their use pattern. The city would have no control over it. I want to see the city off the hook."

Attorney Lawrence Buckner, representing the Gearharts, repeated that the guarantee of the 117 gallons of sewer flow "is the essence of the agreement."

Finance Commissioner Walter P. Lohse offered the opinion that the guarantee of 117 gallons would be endangered only if the "use changed drastically. There would have to be a change in the nature of the types of sewer hookups," he added.

Burke repeated, "I'm saying our intent to reserve the sewer flow is good, but there should be a clause to get us off the hook in the event that something happens."

Buckner argued "Only a major zoning change could dramatically change the sewage flow, and the council has control over such zoning changes."

Lohse agreed the possibility of a drastic change was remote, but there should be a decision on who should take the risk, the city or the Gearharts.

One stumbling block in the agreement appeared to be a clause stating that in the event the agreement is attacked in court, the Gearharts agree to represent the city's interests.

City Attorney Robert Branson and Ole Pace, another member of the law firm hired to represent the city, argued the city could not delegate authority for an attorney hired by Gearhart to represent the city in court.

Buckner explained the Gearharts wanted it (the agreement to represent the city) because it could avoid prohibitive legal fees.

Lohse returned to the council study of the latest agreement document, reminding the council it said only that the agreement asked for the capacity of the lift station and not the sewer system.

Burke answered, "I'm sure they mean the system." He got a reply from Buckner that was exactly what the Gearharts wanted.

Lohse said he did see there was the possibility of the sewer capacity being usurped.

Commissioner Thomas A. Densmore added a comment "some things might come up which would take away sewer capacity."

Gearhart himself rose to say "We're not asking the city to do anything illegal. If the city cannot lawfully perform the contract, it wouldn't be considered a breach."

Pace asked the question, "Is it lawful for the city to deny use of the sewer to someone already in the city? That is part of the problem of reserving capacity. Does the city have to police the installation of every bathtub? Remember this is a potent agreement, bidding the city beyond the present term of every member of this council."

Attorney Jock Heaton, who said at the Jan. 19 meeting of the council he was representing Beeler and Beeler and Lincoln Village Development Co., objected to the agreement.

"It could backfire," he warned. "It would rule out any future development in the northeast section of the city. It takes away the rights of any other developer. If another developer came in with a project in three years and the Gearharts has still done nothing, you would have to deny sewer to the new developer. In surrounding communities, the sewer hookups are on a first-come, first-served basis. We're concerned here about the orderly growth of the city. We're all concerned about future development."

Gearhart replied, "I've been around here 54 years. I have asked for a meeting with the people Mr. Heaton is representing and I got no reply. If you think we're only going to build one house and then let the whole thing sit, the you can turn this down. All our cards are on the table. We are going to do something. There are other ways to accomplish this. If Mr. Heaton represents who I think he does, he'll tell you it can be done. They've already done it."

Gearhart never offered an explanation for that statement.

Heaton replied, "I never intended to say there (See COUNCIL on page 6)

Mother nature turns the tables

Rain in Maine and snow in North Carolina

By ROBERT WELLER

Associated Press Writer
Mother Nature turned tables on the Atlantic Coast, dumping 14 inches of snow as far south as North Carolina while heavy rain fell on Maine. Several deaths were blamed on the storm.

The storm Monday was accompanied by strong winds, gusting up to 70 miles per hour in many parts of the Northeast, turning roads into something akin to carnival bumper-car rides, closing schools and bringing power outages throughout the region from downed power lines.

The National Weather Service said late Monday that the storm was moving into Canada but was still being felt in New York and New England. Travel advisories remained in effect for Vermont and northeast New York.

Temperatures were expected to approach zero overnight in the Northeast — or 40 to 50 below when the chill factor from the strong winds are taken into account.

A separate storm spread snow from Missouri into Kentucky and Tennessee overnight, and travelers' advisories were out for Kentucky, Tennessee and the southern portions of Illinois and Indiana. Some snow accumulations also were expected in southern Ohio. Still farther west, a winter storm threatened to bring snow to Montana, the Dakotas and northern Minnesota.

The rain in Maine, made worse by wind-driven high tides, brought floodwaters into downtown Bangor — forcing several motorists to swim to safety from their cars.

Temperatures dropped sharply later in the day, bringing on some light snow. And authorities said the waters of the Penobscot and Kenduskeag rivers in Maine began receding, but not before causing damage that would run into the millions.

In Westmoreland, N.Y., two firemen suffered heart attacks while battling a fire. One, Leonard Brown, 60, died before snowbound ambulances — traveling on a path dug out by snowplows — could reach him. The other fireman was reported in serious condition.

In Brewster, N.Y., Steven Blaney, 43, foreman of the village public works department, died of a heart attack while driving a snow plow.

Police also blamed the weather for the death of a mailman, Wallace Evans, 53, killed in a collision on slippery roads in Milford, Conn.

The storm's strong winds swept the 362-foot Japanese freighter Musashina Maru hard aground on a rocky beach near Searsport, Maine. Officials said the ship was taking on water but that its crew of 22 was in no immediate danger.

Efforts to remove the ship weren't immediately successful. A Coast Guard spokesman said, "She's a good ship, and both bottoms weren't pierced. We hope to get her off in the end." The ship had arrived in Searsport to take on a cargo of frozen french fried potatoes from northern Maine.

Meanwhile, in the Midwest, temperatures in Northern Illinois plunged to the coldest they've been this winter, dropping to 22 below in Rockford. Chicago registered 1 below. Warmer weather was expected today, but possibly with new snow.

Punxsutawney Phil, the weatherman-ground hog of that Pennsylvania town, promised more of the same. Peeking out of his burrow Monday, he reportedly saw his shadow, which legend says means six more weeks of winter.

Window damage put at $300

Lee County Sheriff's deputies received a report Monday of a broken plate-glass window in Ashton.

Stan Griffith said that the window, valued at $300, was broken at Consol Builders and Supply Co. The incident is believed to have occurred Saturday night.

$265 theft is probed

Lee County Sheriff's deputies are investigating the theft of $265 from Victory Cafe.

Deputies were called to the cafe, which is located at the intersection of U.S. 30 and Ill. 26, by manager Ed Slater. Slater told authorities that two suspicious men entered the cafe Monday evening.

One of the men went in the cafe section and the other into the service station office, at the wet end of the cafe.

While attendant Melvin Douglas left for a sandwich the suspect in the office is believed to have removed the money from a cash-register. When Douglas returned the money was gone.

Witnesses estimated that the two men were between 18 and 20 years old.

Testimony opens in Kagay murder trial

By LENNY INGRASSIA

The gun used to shoot Harold Smith, 64, was found in a cocked position lying next to his body on Aug. 11, a Lee County Sheriff's detective testified this morning at the outset of the murder trial of Scott Alan Kagay. The 14-year-old defendant is standing trial in juvenile court, closed to the public, in the courtroom of Circuit Judge Thomas E. Hornsby.

In a previous hearing, the boy confessed to deputies he had murdered Smith because he was a bad man and attempted to molest him. Judge Hornsby Monday ruled the confession and two others, made by Kagay, will be placed into evidence. Public Defender William Sturgeon had sought to suppress the statements in pre-trial hearings.

Smith's body was found lying in an apple orchard behind the victim's sister's residence at 321 S. Jefferson St. in Amboy. He was shot once in the head with a .22-caliber rifle. Detective Edwin Blake was the first witness called as State's Atty. Patrick E. Ward launched his prosecution. Blake said he found the victim's pockets empty when he examined the body. Holding the murder weapon in his hands, the detective demonstrated the cocking mechanism of the rifle. He said the only way it could be cocked is manually after it is fired, offered in an attempt to rule out suicide.

In cross-examination Sturgeon asked if it was possible anyone could have triggered the rifle before he arrived, to which Blake replied "Yes."

Others allowed in the courtroom were five sheriff's deputies including Sheriff Ray Nehring, expected to testify; Carol Weiser, juvenile officer, and the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kagay, Geneseo.

Kagay was admitted to Singer Mental Health Center the day following the shooting after he led deputies to a cornfield across from his home. There, authorities found Smith's wallet containing $273 in currency and a coin purse. "I remember—I got it from Mr. Smith," Deputy William Haws testified, relating the boy's words.

In an interview at Singer on Sept. 24 Haws said the boy admitted he planned the murder for a week. "He said he had murdered Harold Smith—first for the money and then he said he was a bad man—a homo," Haws testified. The two had been target shooting in the orchard in the evening hours.

Sturgeon attempted to strike the testimony of the confession since Haws had to read a transcript of the session to refresh his memory before testifying. "He had to read from something he didn't write," Sturgeon argued. Judge Hornsby denied the objection.

A key point in the prosecution became clouded just before the noon recess when Haws testified he (Kagay) appeared to be disturbed on Aug. 12, the day following the shooting. The statement was made under cross-examination and was in contrast to Haws' earlier testimony that Kagay appeared normal on that day and Sept. 24 when he admitted he murdered the victim.

The state's case is based in part, upon Kagay's supposed calm attitude concerning the shooting and his premeditation to commit the crime.

Ward moved to have Haws examined as a court witness under objection from Sturgeon. After the judge granted the request, the state's attorney withdrew his question and moved for a recess.

As Ward and Haws began walking from the courtroom, Sturgeon declared Ward should not be allowed to discuss testimony with the deputy and asked Judge Hornsby to find the prosecutor in contempt of court if he did discuss testimony with Haws.

Ward fired back he was finished questioning the witness but added he may call him back to the stand as a rebuttal witness. The judge concurred with Ward and recessed the court.

Kagay was transferred from Singer to a similar institution in Galesburg and, last week, signed himself out of the center. He is being held in the Rockford Detention Center and being shuffled back and forth for the trial, expected to last three days.

The defense is expected to show Kagay was mentally disturbed at the time of the shooting; however, was cured following treatment. The youth was declared competent to stand trial by two psychiatrists: Dr. J. G. Graybill, Rockford, and Werner Teteur, Elgin.

The two psychiatrists are expected to be called on Wednesday and Thursday.

Video-tape recording equipment was moved into the courtroom this morning and was expected to be used this afternoon to show scenes in the apple orchard.

If found guilty, Kagay faces detention in the Department of Corrections, juvenile division, until age 21.

Nurses aide charged in fatal fire

CHICAGO (AP) — A nurses' aid was charged today with arson and felony murder in connection with a North Side nursing home fire that claimed 15 lives and injured more than 30.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Denise Watson, 21, had been charged following two days of investigation. He declined to say whether she had signed a statement or cooperated with investigators after being arrested Monday.

Miss Watson had worked less than three weeks at the Wincrest Manor Nursing and Rest Home when the fire broke out last Friday. Authorities said she had been questioned but not charged in connection with several other mysterious fires in Chicago as well as in her home town of Shawneetown, Ill.

Shortly before the charges were announced, the 15th death from the fire was reported. Lillian C. Perry, 85, died early today of smoke inhalation. A few hours earlier, Clotilde Tisbo, 94, also died of injuries suffered in the blaze.

Twenty-five persons—all elderly residents of the home—remained hospitalized, 11 in critical condition.

Miss Watson was arrested as she left St. Francis Hospital in Evanston where she had been under treatment for smoke inhalation.

Police Supt. James Rochford described her as having "a bad history of pyromania and involvement in a series of arson situations."

Inequality afflicts malpractice system

By DON OAKLEY

The severe burden soaring malpractice insurance costs are placing on the nation's physicians—and ultimately on their patients—is only part of the "malpractice crisis." Even if the present system could continue to lumber along as it has in the past, it would still demand reform.

According to the preliminary findings of one study of medical malpractice claims, many injured parties are being compensated with amounts far in excess of their reported economic loss while many others are either receiving amounts which are considerably less than their reported economic loss or are receiving nothing at all.

Specifically, of those injured parties who do receive awards or settlements, 55 per cent receive more than two times their reported economic loss and 28 per cent receive more than five times their reported economic loss.

But fully 50 per cent of the parties for which medical malpractice claim files are established receive no award or settlement under the present tort liability system.

No doubt many of the latter are pure nuisance suits deserving of dismissal. It is impossible to know, however, how many involve legitimate claims which, for one reason or another, are dropped before trial or are not proven to the satisfaction of a jury.

Other highlights of the study:

1. The average medical malpractice claim is not reported until 13 months after the alleged incident. It takes another 17 months for the average claim to reach final disposition, making the total time from the date of the incident to the date of settlement 30 months. Larger claims take even longer to be closed.

2. While 58 per cent of all claims go to suit, only 7 per cent of all claims are tried to verdict, and 80 per cent of those tried to verdict are settled in favor of the defendant (the doctor or hospital).

3. Awards or settlements for more than $100,000 represent only 2.5 per cent of the incidents, yet result in more than 50 per cent of total awards.

Awards or settlements for more than $50,000 represent 5 per cent of the incidents, yet result in two-thirds of the total awards.

Awards or settlements in excess of $25,000 represent 8 per cent of the incidents, yet result in two-thirds of the total awards.

Awards or settlements in excess of $25,000 represent 8 per cent of the incidents, yet result in more than 75 per cent of total award or settlement dollars.

4. Regardless of the outcome of a claim, substantial amounts of expense money are involved both in bringing a claim and in defending against it.

The study, based on information from 10,000 medical malpractice claims closed in 1974, was initiated by an "All-Industry Committee on Medical Malpractice Insurance" and was funded by the American Insurance Association. The objective was to compile a large base of data which would be useful in considering legislative solutions to the malpractice crisis.

It is cautioned that the results of the study are preliminary and that it involved claims arising over various periods of time and from different parts of the country. These influences must be taken into account before any definite conclusions can be drawn.

The study would seem to support one conclusion a lot of people have already drawn, however, and that is that our present medical malpractice claims system is in pretty much of a mess—providing too much justice to some injured people and too little justice to others.

New campaign laws encourage oddballs

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)—There's an office here where five members have an unwritten agreement. When one, who we'll call Brown, contributes to his candidate, each of the other four donates an equal amount. When Smith gives to his man, the other four follow suit, and so on down the list.

In some campaigns this enables the candidates to keep their records clean with "small" donations. In others it enables each man to exceed the limit of his legal campaign donation.

This example will, of course, surprise no one and that is the point—how easily the new federal clean election law is evaded.

Because the new rules put a straight jacket on honest men, they give clear advantage to campaigners who cut corners.

Equally bad, today's federal and state laws and new party rules encourage extremist candidates of both left and right. They so weaken party control and discipline there's little to keep candidates in hand. As tradition wears thin there is serious danger both major parties will wither, further eroding political responsibility and leaving campaigns in the hands of "in-and-outers." We saw samplings of the mischief such campaigns are capable of in the Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon years, especially when given favored official posts.

The complex and conflicting financial regulations—rules which tend to separate the candidate from party control—and the growing distrust of political parties, openly encourage Watergate shenanigans and extend an open invitation to charlatans to seek high office.

Though I am emotionally opposed to reliance on large donations and committed to the principle of funding campaigns from small donations by many, it is clear that in a nationwide race for the presidential nomination, it is the man with way-out dogmatic views which arouse strong emotions in thousands of voters. This draws enough small donations in sufficient states to qualify the candidate early for matching federal funds who is thereby able to hit the first primaries with vigor.

As freaks, odd balls and fascists of the right and left come to understand the new laws and party rules, they may swarm to the government political handout offices like flies. The requirements for government aid are such they can be met without too much difficulty by any man or woman with a strong emotional cause willing to parade in name under the label of a major political party. With the abolition of winner-take-all provisions in some states, these oddities may end up with delegates at the national conventions.

The worst freaks will not have a chance at the nominations. They will use the conventions to propagate their causes. But extremists of a sort may well succeed at some time in the future more often than in the past.

Very few citizens vote in presidential primaries—a few die-hard party people, those devoted to a cause or to a man who stirs them deeply and a handful of others. Primaries are thus ripe picking for extremists able to whip up the enthusiasm of followers. Though small in number, these loyalists can make strong showings and win major publicity.

The middle of the roader, who promises no more than he can deliver if elected, has a much harder row to hoe. And 1980 will probably be worse. Even if the extremists kill themselves off in multiple primaries, they may along the way kill off the best of the moderates.

Having said all this I'm still an optimist. It's still possible to elect a good man if we put our minds to it.

Gallery fined $3 million

NEW YORK (LENS)—Marlborough Gallery, one of the largest art dealers in New York, has been fined $3.3 million by the city's surrogate court. The decision, which follows a four-year legal battle over the estate of the abstract painter Mark Rothko, casts an unsavory light on the business activities of the smart uptown art galleries clustered around Madison Avenue.

Rothko, a moody but prolific painter, committed suicide in 1970, leaving nearly 800 paintings in his estate. These have since been valued at around $30 million. The Marlborough Gallery, however, managed, within three weeks of probate being granted, to obtain the best 100 works for a mere $18,000 apiece; many of these it subsequently sold for 10 times that price. The remaining 700 paintings it undertook to sell for a handsome 50 per cent commission.

How did it win such favorable terms from the artist's estate? It appointed two of the three executors to positions with the gallery that, the court found, constituted a clear conflict of interest. The executors have now been dismissed from the estate with a further fine of $6 million.

But the court was most critical of Frank Lloyd, Marlborough's founder and a Viennese-born British subject who runs the gallery's international business from branches in Canada, London, Zurich and Tokyo. Lloyd has been found guilty of contempt of court for continuing to sell the Rothko works after a court injunction had ordered him not to do so. He has now been told to return all the paintings in his and the gallery's possession to the estate. Should he do so, his fine might be reduced, though the court clearly has difficulty in ordering the return of paintings no longer in the country.

The complex court case involving seven clients, 19 lawyers, and 15,000 pages of transcript has revealed a story of false and slipshod accounts, inadequate valuations, and much financial sleight of hand that must undermine the public's confidence in the unregulated art world.

The surrogate's ruling is expected to start a movement for greater policing of New York's art dealers. "The whole case is bad for the art business and for the reputations of art dealers," said a member of the Art Dealers' Association of America from which the Marlborough itself is now likely to be expelled.

Can headless Lebanon survive?

Those Maronite extremists whose target appears to be partition must believe that a minuscule Christian state perched between Mount Lebanon and the Mediterranean could manage on its own. But would the foreign banks, companies and tourists that have provided Lebanon's gold share this optimism? Many of them have, in any event, left for good. Those who might be enticed to stay or to return are even less likely to respond if they are invited to a Christian enclave surrounded by a growing Arab world.

Israel was the consequence of a UN decision in 1947 to partition the Palestine mandate; its battle for survival has led to three major wars and the end is not in sight. A Christian mini-Lebanon would be less alien to the Arabs than the Jewish state. But what support could it get from outside to approach Israel's from America?

The Arab world threatens more than a growl. Syria's foreign minister has said that either partition, or a decisive threat to the 300,000 Palestinians whose only home is Lebanon, would be taken by Syria as cause for armed intervention. Israel's defense minister, Shimon Peres, has reiterated his government's stand that intervention by Syria would lead to defensive measures by Israel—which is generally understood to mean that Israel would annex southern Lebanon up to the Litani River.

Both Israel and Syria have pulled surprises in the past, but both countries have reasons not to act in a way that makes war between them inevitable. Israel has long been tempted by the strategic advantages of annexing South Lebanon; these would, at one and the same time, destroy the Palestinian guerrilla bases in the region and offer a side route into Syria. Against this, Israel is held back by the knowledge of the fearsome casualties that Syria has the power to inflict—and by the uncertainties of its present relationship with the American government.

In fact both Israel and Syria are puffing cool air at the erupting volcano that lies between them. It was an Israeli spokesman who this week dismissed as "highly exaggerated" the claim by Lebanon's minister of the interior, Camille Chamoun, that there had been a massive invasion across the Syrian frontier by members of the Syrian-controlled Palestine Liberation Army.

REFLECTIONS—The Dixon Board of Education on Jan. 21 decided to ask parents of elementary school students what to do about overcrowding in Washington and Grand Detour schools.

The first of the sessions is to be held Wednesday in Washington School and we hope parents will respond to the board's invitation to provide advice how to meet the problem.

A second meeting with parents will be held Feb. 18 in Madison School.

We are gratified the board decided to take this action.

In fact, in our opinion the board should have done this at the last October meeting when they decided to bus one class of first graders from Washington School to South Central School.

The problem confronting the board last October is essentially the same as what is to be discussed at the Wednesday meeting at Washington.

Enough first graders showed up at Washington last fall for four classes but there was no room for a fourth class because the board had moved a class of educable mentally handicapped (EMH) students to Washington beginning last September.

At the board meeting in October, in our view, the board caved in to a teacher who gave an impassioned plea not to move the EMH students again and from criticism of the board by a parent of an EMH student.

The EMH class had been moved three times in as many years by the board which was the basis of the emotional plea from the EMH teacher and from the parent of one of the students.

There are 15 or so students in the EMH class now meeting in Washington School. There are about twice that many in several of the regular classes in that school. There are some 20 pupils who are being bused from Washington to South Central so the EMH class can remain there.

Washington School is the home attendance area for bused first graders while the EMH students come from all over the city.

It is a problem with no easy solution and we commend the board this time for deciding to go to the parents of the children who will be affected by any decision. We hope parents will respond.

Things Dixon Talked About

10 YEARS AGO

Frozen out by the artic weather last Saturday, the girls of the Dixon High School GAA will sell bread house-to-house this Saturday in the residential areas. For the 15th year, the GAA is conducting a project to raise money for the March of Dimes. They have sold bread for about five years.

A coon hunters club is being organized by several men in the Telegraph area. The club will hold its first meeting Feb. 5 at 6 p.m., and is looking for new members or folks interested in coon hunting. It is being organized by four hunters.

25 YEARS AGO

Dixon theater-goers have contributed $500 to the annual March of Dimes through Boy Scouts collections in the theaters during the past two weekends. Three troops of scouts carried out organized patrols through the audience Thursday through Sunday both weeks. The theater chairman and soliciting chairman were in charge of the March of Dimes drive in the theaters.

100 YEARS AGO

There will be monthly reviews in the North Dixon school this week, and every four weeks succeeding. Parents, and all interested in our school work, are invited to visit us on such occasions.

The one solitary prisoner in our jail is now so lonesome that he is sorry that he ever meddled with that satchel at the Amboy depot. To pass away time the Sheriff gave him a brush and bucket of whitewash, last week, and he fixed up the prison in spring style. If he is able to "whitewash" his own case before the court next week, he may consider himself lucky.

At the combined instigation of Chamoun and Lebanon's President Franjieh, the Lebanese army and air force at the end of last week intervened openly on the side of the Maronite militia. The intervention was a political gesture, without military significance. It has had major consequences. It contributed to the prime minister's decision at the weekend to throw in the sponge. Rashid Karamah is a tough character who has fought hard against the leftists in his own Moslem camp for one ceasefire after another, plus a very moderate reform in the power-sharing formula.

A more ominous consequence of the army's intervention was its effect on the PLA, the 6,000-10,000-strong force of regular Palestinian soldiers who in practice, although not in theory, come under Syrian army command. Chamoun was wrong, or at worst premature, in claiming that thousands of PLA men had crossed the frontier. But a sizeable number have moved from their base in southern Lebanon to join up, in the Bekaa valley, with other units from Syria. As yet the Lebanese army and the PLA have prowled round each other in the Zahle area. The danger would be when the PLA units cross the mountains and advance toward the coast.

The Syrians want such a battle even less than the Israelis do. Syria's foreign minister and chief of staff were in Beirut last week pursuing a ceasefire that has a chance of sticking. One of the many problems is that the Palestinians now claim that there is no Lebanese authority sufficiently neutral to supervise a ceasefire and that they will obey one only if it is personally supervised by Syrian army chiefs.

The hope of saving what remains of Lebanon lies with those Christians who do not follow their co-religionists to the desperate point of partition. It could already be too late. But the first act, which can originate only from them, is still to get rid of President Franjieh, who has played a devious part second only to Chamoun's, and an idle one second to none.

There are a number of Christian leaders who have shown that they put their country's salvation, and its unity, before sectional interests. Chief among these is the Maronite Patriarch, Monsignor Antonios. The Lebanese are not suddenly going to stop killing one another. There has first to be a man at the top whom the moderates on both sides can trust. Then they can start the long slow process of hauling their extremists back from the business of killing.

Women's bar opens in Tokyo

SALES CLERKS and other employees of Tokyo's Mitsukoshi Department Store enjoy after-work hours with drinks at their women's bar. The bar, on one of the store's sales floors, serves customers as a coffee shop during the daytime.

By NAOAKI USUI
TOKYO (AP) — A plush Tokyo department store has opened a bar exclusively for its women employees, where young salesgirls chat, dance and sometimes get high on discount drinks.

The company says the bar is to promote "better human relations." It is a place to relax after putting up with customers' nastiness, but moderation is maintained, since many Japanese fear that appearing to enjoy themselves too much with fellow workers indicates they are not very serious about their job.

This kind of bar for women is especially unusual in male-dominated Japan, although more and more girls go out drinking these days.

It was opened last year for the 2,200 women working at the Mitsukoshi Department Store in the downtown Nishinabashi District, which sells goods ranging from bread to Rolls Royce automobiles.

"We thought it was about time, and also fair, to have a bar for girls. So we arranged to use this place, which is run as a coffee shop for shoppers during the daytime," said Megumu Matsuzawa, a spokesman for the big department store. "After all, we already had two bars for men."

"We don't refuse boys when they are escorted by women, although the women are masters of the place," he added. "We don't want to offend women who bring boys in."

Yoko Nakazawa, an attractive 21-year-old who works in the men's wear department, drops into the bar twice a week.

"The last time we went skiing, we got a bit high in this women's bar and jumped on a ski tour bus. The next morning, all of us had a hangover at the very foot of the ski grounds," she said.

"This place is cheap, easy to come in with colleagues and right next to my office," said Junko Hayashi, 21, a friend of Miss Nakazawa. "This evening, we are arranging our next skiing trip."

"After all," she added, "we girls make up half of the 4,500 persons working here, and we need relaxation. We are ordered to keep smiling and talking politely all day even to the nastiest, meanest customers.

"But I never come to this place with my steady boy friend, because everyone knows each other. I don't want to be embarrassed by showing my private life to other people," Miss Hayashi commented, with two friends at the same table agreeing emphatically.

For the many Japanese who steadily date office colleagues, the meeting place is generally fairly close to the office — since both probably live in farout suburbs — but distant enough to escape other colleagues' curious eyes.

A bartender said there were two things he had never seen in this employees' bar — steady couples and guests who get drunk.

"It seems everyone is controlling herself or himself. Otherwise, their boss will know what embarrassing things they did last evening," he said.

The bar is open from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., and the number of guests each day has grown from about 40 to nearly 100, spokesman Matsuzawa said. The drinks and snacks all are sold at a discount of at least 20 per cent, he added, with beer costing 55 cents a bottle and good whiskey $10 a bottle.

"We've broken even financially, though it is part of the company welfare program for our employees," he added.

Noriyuki Daira, the chief bartender, said, "Many of our regulars like sweet cocktails which cost up to 85 cents, while about 30 per cent are too shy to go for booze. They are just enjoying an adult women's atmosphere with glasses of soft drinks."

And one male employee commented, "That bar is a place for girls who believe they can drink. I'm not interested because I usually drink only with my male colleagues. Drinking is strictly a man's business in Japan."

You might find the following facts helpful the next time you have a cold.

—Penicillin and other so-called "wonder drugs" to not appear to be effective against the common cold viruses. These drugs should be used under strict medical supervision.

—Laxatives do not cure colds and should not be taken regularly without a doctor's specific instruction.

—Common cold vaccines are not universally effective in preventing colds, but some physicians explore their usefulness with people who experience frequent or severe colds.

—Cold tablets or antihistamines that may be purchased over-the-counter neither prevent nor cure the common cold.

—Vitamin supplements, including vitamin C, do not appear to have preventive or curative powers when used for colds. The person who eats a variety of foods, abundant in the essential nutrients, does not need vitamin supplements, unless such a need has been identified by his physician.

—According to the American Medical Association, most of today's doctors recommend that individual thirst dictates fluid consumption when one has a cold. There is no proof supporting the old belief that a liquid diet will flush away a cold.

—Low temperatures, drafts and inclement weather do not cause colds. Such factors can trigger an infection if a person's defenses are lowered by chilling or dampness. Viruses cause the common cold.

—Concoctions of lemon juice, hot water and alcoholic beverages may help one "enjoy his misery," but they will not cure a cold.

Cervical Cancer Detected Early Through 1973 Illinois Law

A 1973 Illinois law aimed at detecting cervical cancer in its early stages has already proved its value, reports Francis G. Reeverts, Lee County Extension Adviser.

The law requires hospitals to offer a cervical cancer test, a "pap smear," to each female patient aged 20 and over.

"This test is very useful in diagnosing cervical cancer in its early stages, even before symptoms appear," Reeverts notes. "And early diagnosis offers the greatest chance for a cure."

While most cases of cervical cancer are detected in physicians' offices, hospital tests offer an additional lifesaving opportunity to women.

According to the Illinois Department of Health, the 1973 law was the "key factor" in detecting at least 700 cases of early cervical cancer last year. The new measure is expected to prevent hundreds of needless cancer deaths each year in Illinois.

Fabric Characteristics Affect Warmth

If you're in the market for warm, winter clothing, remember that warmth in garments is directly related to fiber content, says Frances Reeverts, Lee County Extension Adviser.

Wool and acrylics are two generic groups of fibers known for their excellence for warm clothing.

The construction of the wool fibers makes the clothing warm. Wool fibers are a series of overlapping scales. Air spaces around the fibers, in the yarns, and in the fabric itself keep body heat close to the body. Motionless air is one of the best insulators known.

Absorbance also makes wool warm. Wool picks up moisture in vapor form, and heat is created as the moisture is absorbed. When you go from a dry indoor atmosphere into the damp outdoors, the moisture absorbed by wool clothing helps protect against cold air.

The acrylics—Orlon, Acrilan, Creslan and Zefran — are the synthetic fibers most like wool. They are used extensively in knits, fur-like fabrics and sweaters.

Bulking or crimping increases the volume of acrylic fibers without increasing their weight. Bulk yarns trap air as do wool fibers and thereby contribute warmth. The bulking process also softens acrylic fibers giving them some of this soft texture of wool.

When looking for warm clothes, Reeverts advises you also consider the construction of the fabric.

Quilted fabrics, consisting of two layers of fabric and often a filling material, are both fashionable and warm. Pile fabrics — corduroy, velvet and suede-like woven fabrics — are warmer than flat fabrics because they trap more body heat. Pile fabrics used as liners in coats and jackets are particularly warm because they are worn next to the body and trap even more heat.

Napped fabrics are warm because the dead air space is increased by the soft twist of filling yarns and fibers on the fabric surface. Cotton, wool, polyester and acrylics are fibers often used in making napped fabrics. Look especially for short, compact nap on a fabric made with firm yarns, closely woven. This kind wears best.

Flannel is a napped fabric that's been used for years. The word "flannel" refers to wool flannel unless otherwise stated. Cotton flannel flattens under pressure and has less insulating value than wool.

Flannelette refers to a fabric that has been napped on one side only. Outing flannel is napped on both sides, and therefore may be a little warmer.

Correction

It was inadvertently stated in Friday's edition of the Dixon Telegraph that Mr. and Mrs. Donald LaBar had a baby boy. It should have stated that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Donald LaBar had a baby boy. The Telegraph regrets the error.

Dear Readers: Recently, "Grumpwich from Atlanta" wrote to say she made tremendous sacrifices to put her husband through professional school and now she feels left behind socially and intellectually. The unhappy woman (now 40) wondered how other wives who did the same thing feel about it. I told her I'd ask.

Well, I did—and they let me know in very emphatic language. Although the "aginners" invariably have a stronger compulsion to write than those who are FOR something, I was astonished that the women who said "I'm sorry I did it" outnumbered, by eight to one, those who said "I'm glad." Here are some excerpts:

Dear Ann: I, too, put my husband through school. Sorry? You bet. After five years of slaving (a factory, the only job I could find), guess what he told me. "You wouldn't fit in. Your grammar and vocabulary would be an embarrassment. You should have been studying evenings, after work." (He didn't say who would be doing the washing and ironing and marketing and cooking and cleaning.) If I had it to do over again—I'd have put MYSELF through and let him paddle his own canoe.—Blew It

Wives who put husbands through school sound off

Dear Ann: I put my husband through dental school and he put me through hell. The whole time I was working 60 hours a week, he was playing games with a girl in his class. I didn't have a clue. The week after he got his diploma he told me I wasn't "his type" and opened an office with the girlfriend—whom he later married.—Just Call Me Bonehead

Dear Ann: I met Joe when we were in high school. He wanted to be an engineer. We both worked until his junior year, then Joe lost his job, so I worked a double shift three days a week. Joe graduated with honors and I was so thrilled I bawled for three days. That was 14 years ago. Today we have four children and a wonderful marriage. Joe tells everyone he couldn't have made it without me. He's just as proud of me as I am of him. —Happy In Hartford

Dear Ann: I'm a guy who put my girl through college. We were childhood sweethearts, in love as far back as I can remember. I went into my dad's business after one year of college and we were married. She wanted to be a nurse so I put her through. (For five years I ate plenty of canned junk and picked up lots of Chinese food.) After two years of nursing she divorced me and married a doctor because we had "nothing to talk about anymore."—The Boob

Dear Ann: I put my husband through law school and worked like a dog to do it. After 25 years of marriage he left me for a young chicken but I'm not crying. Let HER worry about his high blood pressure, his arthritis and kidney stones. At least I won't have to pay for his funeral, too.—Better Off

From Chicago: The lady from Atlanta hit the nail on the head. But I was dumber yet. I worked in an all-night diner and scrimped and saved to put the jerk through four years of undergraduate and four years of medical school. The Honorable Doctor left me, not for a woman who was better educated than I, but—get this—a short, fat, bald, middle-aged guy.—It Only Hurts When I Laugh

Let's Talk About Decorating

By KARLEEN BENSINGER
The Well-Decorated Bedroom

Comfort is the key word in decorating a bedroom. Try to make your bedroom as liveable as possible by choosing restful, pleasing colors that create a relaxing atmosphere. If your master bedroom is large enough, why not set aside space for a sitting area, sewing corner, or home office? Or, perhaps you'd prefer a separate dressing-makeup area in your master bedroom.

If you're decorating a small bedroom, choose furniture that's in scale with the size of the room. Light colors and wall to wall carpeting will make it look larger. Carefully placed mirrors will seem to extend the bedroom walls. Do you want to place a queen or king size bed in your small room? Here are some ideas to make the room seem large enough and not too crowded. Wallpaper the wall directly behind the bed. Choose a paper design which is also available in a matching fabric, then select a bedspread of this fabric. The bed will seem to blend into the wall. Since you'll have little floor-space, mount shelves on the walls for books and storage. Choose tall chests that use wall space but little floor space.

Dunbar's has a wide selection of attractive quality bedroom furniture. Why not stop in and see for yourself? Fine furnishings for your home with your ideas in mind of course.

Alcohol: The new teen-age turn-on

What is it really?

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
and BRIAN SULLIVAN

SEVENTH IN A SERIES

From Bacchus, the Roman god of wine, to Falstaff, Shakespeare's great comic figure, to the actor W. C. Fields, drinking has had some striking symbols, literary and real. Far less well known is just what alcohol is and what it does.

It's simply a chemical compound, although a remarkable one, called ethyl alcohol or ethanol. In the chemists' language, it's C₂H₅OH.

Alcohol is a naturally occurring chemical, the product of fermentation, or the action of yeast on plant sugars. Because of this, most authorities believe that ancient man came upon alcohol by chance, that yeast spores could have acted on a store of berries or fruit lying in a warm place to produce the first wine.

Once discovered, man probably took to deliberate fermentation of beer and wine, a practice that began in prehistoric times and has continued since and throughout most of the world without interruption.

In the 15th century, the process of distillation was developed, enabling man to produce drinks with much higher concentrations of alcohol. The beer and wine was limited to about 14 per cent alcohol by natural processes. Distillation allowed 50 per cent or more alcohol content.

In the United States, most beer contains about four per cent pure alcohol, while orinary table wines contain up to 14 per cent. Ports or sherries, or dessert wines, are fortified, producing an alcohol content of up to 21 per cent.

The distilled beverages, vodka, gin, rum, brandy and rye, bourbon and Scotch whiskeys usually contain 40 to 50 per cent pure alcohol. The amount of "proof" seen on the label is twice the pure alcohol strength; 80 proof is 40 per cent alcohol, 100 proof is 50 per cent.

For most liquors, one ounce from the bottle contains about a half-ounce pure alcohol. It takes the body about an hour to burn up the alcohol in a one-ounce drink.

The flavors differ, however. Gin is alcohol flavored with juniper berries. Whiskeys are made from grains such as corn, barley and rye. Rum comes from molasses. Vodka, considered tasteless and odorless, is usually from corn, other cereals, and potatoes.

What the alcohol does is go immediately into the bloodstream and directly to the brain, the central nervous system.

A martini or a straight shot of liquor gets there fastest. But when the liquor is diluted, the absorption is slowed. Water is the best mix; alcohol diluted with water is absorbed most slowly. Carbonated mixes such as club soda or gingerale induce faster absorption than water.

In addition to a wide variety of effects on the body, alcohol has the mysterious capability of causing intoxication.

"Yet, incredible as it may seem, there is no generally accepted explanation of how alcohol induces intoxication," says a government-sponsored special study called Alcohol and Health.

"The gap in knowledge about this basic effect of alcohol on the brain handicaps treatment and, possibly, prevention." Next: After the Drinking Starts.

For Wednesday, Feb. 4, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may have some problems today getting others to cooperate. Don't be as unyielding as they are or nothing will get done.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's nice to be helpful, but be careful who you volunteer to aid today. You may hit someone who's waiting to unload all their burdens.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is definitely not the day to buck the majority. Being the lone dissenter will probably leave you stranded.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Play down your role in joint endeavors today. Blowing your own horn too loudly will only turn associates against you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It would be a mistake to challenge one whose view conflicts with yours today. The sympathy is likely to be with your opponent.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're operating in a strange commercial arena today, be sure the deal is clear to you, so you'll have recourse if you're hoodwinked.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Matters having a far-reaching effect on the household or family must be thoroughly understood by you and your mate today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A person who has neglected to thank you for past favors will knock on your door again today. Don't look for a different ending.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Normally, Lady Luck smiles upon you. Today, you could venture where you know the odds are against you — and lose your shirt.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Timing is all-important today. It would be foolish to make concessions and upset your well planned intentions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Just because the person who presents a plan to you is strong-willed and forceful doesn't mean he's right. Use your own judgment.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your generous nature can be a detriment today if you find you'll be giving more than you can afford. Don't overextend yourself.

Baffled by drop in heating oil prices

CHICAGO (AP) — An industry observer admits he's baffled by the apparent downward trend of home heating oil prices in the face of cold weather and comparatively low supplies. "It almost defies analysis," Herb Hugo said Monday. Hugo, senior editor of Platt's Oilgram, said oil prices usually don't come down until spring. He also pointed out there is 10 per cent less heating oil in storage now than a year ago and much of the nation is experiencing the coldest weather of the year—two factors which normally drive the price up.

He said ARCO, Inc., one of the 10 largest oil companies in the nation, reduced gasoline and heating oil prices by 2 cents a gallon Sunday. In addition, several large Midwestern independent oil companies reduced prices by 1 cent in recent days. These include Clark Oil & Refining Corp.; Total Leonard, which operates mostly in Michigan; and the Rock Island Oil Co., which operates mostly in Indiana. "This is heavy downward pressure on the market," Hugo said. "I don't see how the other companies will be able to withstand the pressure." As a reason for the downturn, Hugo said his best guess was that it might reflect industry reaction to the Omnibus Energy Bill which went into effect Sunday. The bill requires sharply lower prices on domestic crude oil. Hugo said heating oil prices vary greatly across the nation, but on the average they were about 38 cents a gallon on the first of the year.

In the last 10 days many oil companies have come down a penny on gasoline, "but that's not surprising," Hugo said. "That's definitely competition—the result of heavy supplies and less demand." Gasoline prices average about 57 cents a gallon now, down by about a penny from the first of the year and about 6 cents lower than last August.

Senior Party Line

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column, and the one to follow, will deal exclusively with questions seniors may have as they prepare to file federal or state income tax returns. More specific questions should be directed to the U.S. Internal Revenue Service or the Illinois Department of Revenue.

Isn't it true that many seniors don't even have to file income tax returns? How is this determined? What does and doesn't count as income?—P.I.

Dear Mrs. I: Single persons 65 or older don't have to file a federal income tax return unless their income in 1975 was $3,100 or more (this is an increase from the 1974 figure of $2,800). If you and your spouse are filing a joint return and are both 65 or older, you don't have to file unless your income last year was $4,900 or more (up from $4,300 in 1974). If you're filing a joint return but only one of you is 65, you don't have to file unless your gross income is $4,150 or higher. In all of these instances the figure is higher for seniors than it is for younger people, meaning that fewer seniors must submit tax forms to the federal government.

The most important thing to remember is what counts and what doesn't count as income. Do not count as income your Social Security benefits, because they are not taxable. Do not count regular Railroad Retirement benefits (but do count any supplemental annuities received from the Railroad Retirement system). Veterans' benefits, including compensation or pensions for service—or non-service connected disabilities, are also not taxable. In 1975 all Social Security recipients and railroad retirees received a one-time $50 payment under a new federal tax but act. That $50 is not taxable. Public assistance benefits also do not count as income.

What does count, then? Any wages or salaries earned if you were employed is one example. So is any money you made through self-employment. If you owned property and rented it out, or rented out part of your home, that income can be taxed, although you should first deduct expenses like repairs, utilities and depreciation. Income from a private pension or annuity plan also should be reported. Add these figures to determine whether or not you must file a return—but do not include Social Security or other non-taxable items.

Even if you do not have to file a return, you will want to if you had income that was taxed—for example, deductions from your paycheck. Filing a return is the only way to get a refund of the tax that was withheld.

My 65th birthday was in September 1975. Does this qualify me for the extra exemption given to seniors?—F.A.

Dear Mr. A: If you were 65 on Dec. 31, 1975, you are entitled to an extra exemption on your federal income tax return. That means a total exemption of $1,500 instead of $750. If your spouse is also 65 or older, you both receive the double exemption for a total of $3,000. Blind persons, regardless of age, are allowed an extra $750 exemption. That means a blind person 65 or older would actually be entitled to three exemptions—one regular, one on the basis of age, and one for blindness. On this year's federal tax returns every taxpayer will receive a $30 credit on tax owed. This $30 credit applies to all equally—there are no special additions for age or disability.

Senior citizens 65 and older are also eligible for a double exemption on their state income tax forms. Since the regular exemption is $1,000 per person, seniors are allowed a personal exemption of $2,000, or $4,000 for a couple.

If you don't have to file a federal tax return, must you file a state income tax return. And, if you do file both returns, is the same income total reported and taxed?—T.H.

Dear Mrs. H: Let's say you are single and over 65. If your income is less than $3,100, you don't have to file a federal return. As a senior citizen, you are entitled to exemptions totalling $2,000 on your state income tax. If your income is $2,000 or less, the exemptions allowed mean that you will have no taxable income to report. Income between $2,000 and $3,100 will be subject to state income tax.

Similarly an elderly couple with less than $4,900 in reportable income need not file a federal return. This couple would be entitled to $4,000 in state income tax exemptions ($2,000 each), so that only income between $4,000 and $4,900 is taxable by the state. Of course, if you worked, and state income tax was withheld from your paycheck, you will want to fill out a return in order to claim your refund.

For those who fill out both federal and state returns, gross income is not in many cases the same thing. As far as seniors are concerned, here's a point to remember: Income you received from a pension, annuity or profit-sharing plan is not subject to the state income tax, although it is taxed by the U.S. government. On the state income tax form, use line 4-c to subtract from your gross income the amount you received from the pensions or annuity. If you forgot to do this in years past, or didn't know about it, you can file for a refund for the past three years that you paid tax on that private pension income. You will have to fill out a special form.

The answers to the above questions are based on official publications and on inquiries to both federal and state tax offices. More specific inquiries should be directed to the Internal Revenue Service (1-800-252-2921 toll-free statewide; 435-1040 in Chicago, and 1-800-972-5400 elsewhere in the 312 Area Code) or to the Illinois Department of Revenue (1-800-252-8972 toll-free statewide, 312-641-2150 in Chicago and Cook County area).

Persons may call the toll-free Senior Action Hotline 800-252-6565 with questions or complaints about government agencies or programs or for information about tax relief, health care, food stamps, Social Security, employment, housing or legal aid.

In Dixon persons may call the Lee County Council for Aging 288-2117.

Fifth anniversary for Winning Wheels

Winning Wheels, Prophetstown, is the visible evidence of a dream of Mike Maki, who, as a DeKalb teen-ager, was paralyzed in a swimming accident, later lived in Orchard Glen Nursing Home and died Dec. 30, 1970.

It was Maki's dream there would be a place for paraplegics to live and to work which was adapted to their physical disabilities and which also recognized in every other way they had the same aspirations, emotional needs and potential contributions as all other human beings.

A chicken dinner cooked by the Dixon Men's Garden Club and sponsored by the Dixon Woman's Club will be served for the benefit of Winning Wheels, Inc., in Loveland Community House, Feb. 19 from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Winning Wheels observed its fifth anniversary in December with a dinner in the First Methodist Church, Prophetstown, attended by more than 200 persons.

Its affairs are conducted by a 12-member board. Winning Wheels was incorporated as a nonprofit corporation in March,

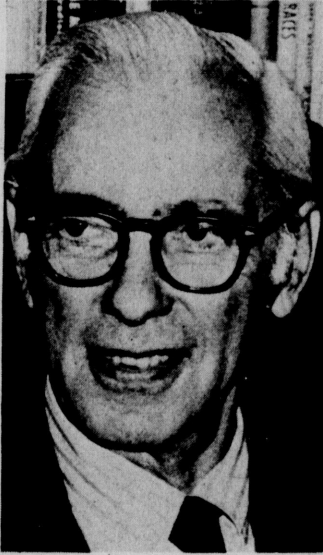

Conference on peace planned at NIU

DEKALB— "We know you can teach war. We've got naval academies; we've got military academies," says Joseph R. Ellis. "Can we teach peace? I'm not sure."

Some educators are certain peace can be taught and even learned, but personally the Northern Illinois University education professor isn't sure how best to insure that people "ain't gonna study war no more."

For starters, Ellis, Dr. Leonard Pourchot and others are organizing a Peace Education Conference here March 1, in hopes of getting other educators to consider schooling citizens in a topic they find most people say they would like to see taught.

Ashley Montagu, the famed British-born anthropologist and social biologist, and Stephen Cloud, special assistant to U.S. Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., are the featured speakers.

Anyone interested is welcome to attend all sessions in Northern's Holmes Student Center. There is no charge and advance registration is unnecessary.

The conference opens at 1 p.m. in the Center's Carl Sandburg Auditorium with Cloud presenting a report on the current status of peace education throughout the world. Seminars follow and the sessions end the same night after Montagu's 7 p.m. address on "Population and Peace: Priorities for Schools."

Among questions expected to be discussed besides whether peace can be taught, are if so, how and where and to whom?

MT. MORRIS — A special meeting of the Mt. Morris School Board will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m., in the Little Theater at the high school. The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss budget recommendations for the 1976-77 school term.

NBA All-Star

More than 500,000 basketball fans cast their votes earlier this season to select the starting teams for tonight's National Basketball Association All-Star game in Philadelphia. When the ballots were counted, the top vote-getter was this Golden State Warrior, pictured on the right. The popular 6-foot, 7-inch forward led his team to the NBA championship last year, scoring 118 points in a four-game sweep against the powerful Washington Bullets. The 10-year basketball veteran also played for the American Basketball Association's Oakland Oaks. His controversial move to the ABA led to one of the first legal battles between the two leagues.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is this NBA All-Star?

Teaching jobs still available, says ISU official

NORMAL-BLOOMINGTON, Ill. — Contrary to popular belief, there still are jobs in teaching — if candidates are aggressive, enthusiastic and innovative, according to Parker Lawlis, director of placement at Illinois State University.

Fewer numbers of teachers are needed these days, but while figures indicate that the situation will not get much better, there are ways to get into the teaching profession, a study by Lawlis indicated.

"Individuals can increase their marketability as teacher candidates in many 'crowded' fields by increasing the scope of classes they are qualified to teach. Or it would help to secure a minor in a subject which is in greater demand," he said.

There are fields that need teachers. According to Lawlis' study, the greatest demand for teachers is ranked in this order: (1) agriculture; (2) industrial technology; (3) physical science; (4) mathematics; (5) most areas of junior high school; (6) special education with multi-fields; (7) library science; (8) music; (9) reading; and (10) elementary education for men.

Candidates for teaching positions can enhance consideration by being able to assist with coaching, Lawlis said. Their ability to be mobile, and a willingness to start as a substitute teacher or teacher's aid also will better their chances.

"It would appear that quality graduates in all fields should be able to secure positions if they have selected a saleable major and minor, have an expanded geographic area, are innovative within their fields, and are flexible and enthusiastic about teaching," he concluded.

However, a teaching degree no longer will guarantee a teaching position anywhere. The teacher shortage that existed during the 50s and 60s has ended and probably will never return.

The end of the teacher boom has come about from declining enrollments in the public schools, Lawlis said. Lower turnover rates, increased financial crises in school districts, increased pay, and persons trained in previous years who return to teaching all contribute to a lesser need for new graduates.

Of the 1,658 education majors who graduated from ISU last spring, 884 currently are teaching. The trend for graduates is to use their education degree in other fields, he said.

Dribble, pass shoot contest a set Feb. 14

The Dixon Park District will sponsor its second annual Dribble, Pass and Shoot contest Feb. 14 at Washington School.

The contest is open to every boy and girl between the fifth and eighth grades, boys will be competing against the girls in the same grade levels. Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place finishers in each grade level. All fifth graders will start at 1 p.m., sixth grade at 2 p.m., seventh grade at 2:45 p.m., and eighth grade at 3:30 p.m. Entries may be made through basketball coaches or by calling the Dixon Park District at 284-2965, or 2000 W. After setting downhill record Steiner is gold medal hopeful

By WICK TEMPLE
AP Sports Editor
INNSBRUCK (AP)—By the time you read this, Anton Steiner may have fallen on his backside and ended his hopes of getting into the Olympics. No matter. He typifies the spirit of the Games that began in ancient Greece and have endured wars and disasters. Steiner, a well-scrubbed, cherub-faced, 17-year-old Austrian, broke the downhill record on the terrifying Pat-scherkofel Mountain course Monday by more than 6.5 seconds. That alone might indicate that he is an Olympic gold medal hopeful. As a matter of fact, he may not even make the Austrian team. Two more practice runs will decide which three skiers the Austrians select to join Franz Klammer for their highly rated squad in the Winter Games. In an interview after his sensational run Monday, Steiner conceded that he never had thought seriously about the Olympics. "Now I think that I, Werner Grissman, Klaus Weber and Josef Walcher should compete for the three places left on the Austrian team," he said. The fourth berth already is locked up by Klammer, the gold medal favorite who has won four World Cup downhill races this season. Austrian team officials have said the three fastest in the trials will join Klammer on the team, which is heavily favored in the dangerous, 75-mile-per-hour downhill. Steiner flashed down the 3,145-meter trail in 1:49.04 minutes Monday to break the record of 1:55.78 set last year by Klammer, who said he took it easy in finishing third and sixth in the two downhill runs. In other action Monday hockey teams from Czechoslovakia, Poland and West Germany won preliminary games to qualify for Olympics' medal competition. The United States, Japan and the heavily-favored Russians were expected to do the same today. Speed skaters Sheila Young of Detroit, Lean Poults of Northbrook, Ill.; Peter Mueller of Mequon, Wis., and Dan Carroll of St. Louis carried high hopes for the United States in their respective races. They and the remainder of the U.S. speed skating team arrived in Innsbruck Monday from Switzerland where Miss Young, 25, set a world record of 40.91 seconds in the 500-meter race.

Miss Poults, 24, won the 1,500-meter event in a U.S. record time of 2:13.98 minutes and Mueller, 21, won the men's 500 meters. Those results in an international speed skating meet gave the American team more hope than ever for several medals. The other best bet, figure skater Dorothy Hamill of Riverside, Conn., was suffering from a cold and sore calf muscles from working out only two hours instead of her usual six. The East Germans put on a strong bobsled showing in trials Monday, setting a record of 56.28 seconds over the 6,220-meter course. The opening ceremony is set for Wednesday afternoon in the stadium in which the 90-meter ski jumpers plummet.

East is favored tonight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "We're the favored ball club, but at All-Star games, I've seen some strange things happen," said Eastern Conference Coach Tom Heinsohn of Boston prior to tonight's National Basketball Association mid-season match-up at the Spectrum. Heinsohn, whose East team was the winner last year 108-102 at Phoenix and leads the West in the series 16-9, is making his fourth appearance as the conference's coach. His club won at Chicago in 1973, but lost at Los Angeles in 1972 and at Seattle in 1974. Perhaps one of the factors in establishing the East as the favorite is that the team has four of the five players who started in last year's victory. That group includes guard Walt Frazier of the New York Knicks, who was the Most Valuable player in the 1975 game after scoring 30 points. The other repeat starters are forwards Elvin Hayes of Washington and John Havlicek of Boston, and center Bob McAdoo of Buffalo, the league's No. 1 scorer. Joining them will be guard Dave Bing of Washington. Hayes, however, is nursing an injured wrist, and probably will see only limited action. "I just want our guys to go out and try and win the game," said the determined Heinsohn. "We have guys who can run and hit the boards, like McAdoo and (Boston's) Dave Cowens. So we should be able to capitalize on that." Cowens is the only other East player who has won the MVP award in the All-Star game, gaining the honor in 1973 when he paced the East to a 104-84 romp with 15 points and 13 rebounds. In addition to Cowens, the East's reserves include forwards Rudy Tomjanovich of Houston, George McGinnis of Philadelphia and John Drew of Atlanta, and guards Doug Collins of Philadelphia, Randy Smith of Buffalo and JoJo White of Boston. The West will have one former MVP on its squad, starting forward Rick Barry of Golden State, winner of the award in 1967. Starting along with Barry will be forward Bob Dandridge of Milwaukee, center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles and guards Brian Winters of Milwaukee and Nate Archibald of Kansas City. Golden State's Al Attles, coach of the West, will have a bench including forwards Curtis Rowe of Detroit, Jamaal Wilkes of Golden State and Scott Wedman of Kansas City, rookie center Alvan Adams of Phoenix and guards Fred Brown of Seattle, Phil Smith of Golden State and Norm Van Lier of Chicago. Seven of the West's 12 players will be making their first All-Star appearances, compared to four for the East. "The East will have the edge in experience, but the West can not be taken lightly," said Attles. "We have the big guy (Abdul-Jabbar) in the middle." The nationally televised game was scheduled to begin at 9:40 p.m., EST. If it is a sellout, an All-Star game attendance record of 18,516 would be set.

Three elected

NEW YORK (AP) — You're no kid if you saw Roger Connor play major league baseball. And you're forgiven if you've never heard of him, even if you are a baseball buff. But the Baseball Hall of Fame's Veterans Committee remembered him Monday after dusting off some old record books. They showed that Connor, who died 45 years ago in his native Waterbury, Conn., had a .325 major league batting mark through 18 seasons with four National League clubs from 1880 to 1897. It also showed that when he broke in as a third baseman he threw left-handed, not uncommon in those dead ball days, but primarily was a first baseman. His best year was in 1887 when he hit .383 with 17 home runs for New York. In that season bases on balls counted as base hits. The veterans committee, which votes on players retired from the major leagues for at least 25 years and persons in the executive-manager-umpire category who have been retired for five years, also elected Fred Lindstrom, a good fielding, .300-plus hitter for John McGraw's New York Giants. Also elected was Cal Hubbard, a former umpire. Hubbard, 75, became the first player ever to be elected into both the pro football and baseball Hall of Fame. He umpired in the American League in 1936 until he took over as supervisor of AL umpires in 1954. Hubbard, a 6-foot-2, 270-pounder, was a two-way tackle in the National Football League with the Green Bay Packers, the New York Giants and Pittsburgh between 1927 and 1936 and became a charter member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1963. Lindstrom, 70, got word of his selection at his home in Port Richey, Fla. "It's a real kick, a real honor. There are many wonderful players and good friends already there," he said. Lindstrom played with Giants in the 1924 World Series against Washington as an 18-year-old rookie and set a Series record with four hits in a game, all off Walter Johnson. He had some big years with .358 and .379 for the Giants, but never won a batting title. He was traded to Pittsburgh after the 1933 season and closed out his career in 1936, winding up with a .311 lifetime mark. He also served as baseball coach at Northwestern University for 14 seasons. The three new members, all unanimous selections, will be formally inducted into the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., Aug. 9 along with Robin Roberts and Bob Lemon, standout pitchers in the 1950s who were selected by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Riverdale falls to eighth

By The Associated Press
Eldorado's powerful Eagles held their vise-like grip on first place in the Associated Press Class A Illinois High School basketball poll for the fifth straight week. The Eagles, boosting their record to 21-0, smashed Edwards County 91-70 and previously ranked Carmi, 73-57, and nailed 15 first-place votes to amass 342 of a possible 352 poll points. There were no changes among the top four teams. Lawrenceville remained second with 321 points and was named first on two ballots. Buda Western had four firsts and totaled 300 points while defending champion Venice, getting the final first-place vote, retained the No. 4 spot with 273 points. The voting is done by a panel of 22 sportswriters and broadcasters with a first-place vote worth 16 points, second place 15 and on down to one point for a 16th place vote. After the first four places, there was considerable shuffling in the rankings with only Galena making the top 16 while Carmi dropped out after losses to Bridgeport and Carmi. Port Byron Riverdale, fifth last week, fell to eighth after suffering its first loss of the season, 46-41 to Amboy. Winnebago and Cairo each moved up a notch to fifth and sixth, respectively, while undefeated Gridley climbed from 10th to seventh. Watseka climbed from 11th to No. 9 and Mt. Pulaski also advanced two places to No. 10. ROVA lost to Kewanee 80-78 and skidded to No. 11 after being ninth last week. Madison climbed one spot to No. 11 and Kaneland jumped from 15th to No. 13. Effingham plummeted from No. 8 to No. 14 after a 71-51 scalding at the hands of Stewardson-Strasburg. Bloomington Central Catholic edged up one place to No. 15 and Galena moved into the top 16 with an 18-2 record. The top 16 teams in the Associated Press Class A Illinois High School basketball poll including team records, first-place votes and total points: 1. Eldorado (21-0) (15) 342; 2. Goodman not superstitious, likes the number one rating

By The Associated Press
"We're winning but we haven't hit our peak yet, maybe we're fooling a lot of people," mused Norm Goodman, coach of East Leyden's Eagles, the No. 1 ranked team in the Associated Press Class AA Illinois High School basketball poll. "I'd say we're on schedule but I'd like to come into it in the next couple of weeks. I'm worried about a mental let-down." Only a severe letdown can prevent the Eagles from finishing the regular season with a 24-0 record. They are 19-0 at present with five games left against DesPlaines Valley Conference opponents whom the Eagles have previously defeated this season. Goodman has no superstitions about being ranked No. 1. "Why not, let the other guys chase us. I'd rather be No. 1 instead of No. 2."

East Leyden remained No. 1 by a much wider margin this week than last when the Eagles wrestled the top spot from Peoria Richwoods by the scant margin of one poll point. East Leyden picked up 11 first-place votes in the current poll to 10 for Richwoods and totaled 332 out of a possible 352 points. Richwoods had 321 points to remain a strong second. The balloting is on the basis of 16 points for a first-place vote, 15 for second and on down. Chicago Phillips, the defending state champion, picked up the other first place vote and had 282 points to remain third, one point ahead of Aurora West as the first four teams retained their positions of the previous week. After that there was a complete scramble in the standings as a result of ranking teams defeating each other. Decatur Eisenhower handed Normal Community its first loss, Thornridge knocked off Chicago Heights Bloom, Aurora West dumped Elgin and Peoria Central was defeated by Richwoods. Central has but three losses—all of them to Richwoods. Normal slipped from sixth to ninth and Bloom plunged from fifth to 10th as Galesburg and Sterling each climbed a notch to 11th and 12th, respectively. Chicago Marist went from No. 10 to 13th following a loss to Chicago Leo and Chicago Orr moved from 16th to 14th. Peoria Central held 15th place and LaSalle-Peru climbed into the top 16 as Elgin dropped out following its 67-50 loss to Aurora West. The top 16 teams in The Associated Press Class AA Illinois high school basketball poll including team records, first-place votes and total points: 1. East Leyden (19-0) (11) 332; 2. Peoria Richwoods (18-0) (10) 321; 3. Chicago Phillips (18-2) (1) 282; 4. Aurora West (19-2) 281; 5. Joliet Central (16-2) 231; 6. Decatur Eisenhower (14-1) 209; 7. Chicago Gordon Tech (18-1) 197; 8. Thornridge (17-3) 170; 9. Normal Community (18-1) 152; 10. Chicago Heights Bloom (15-4) 147; 11. Galesburg (18-2) 138; 12. Sterling (17-2) 93; 13. Chicago Marist (20-2) 87; 14. Chicago Orr (16-1) 83; 15. Peoria Central (14-3) 79; 16. LaSalle-Peru (13-3) 32. Others receiving votes listed in order of points: Oak Park, Chicago St. Laurence, Elgin, Belleville East, North Chicago, Alton, Niles West, Bloomington, Chicago Weber, Lockport, McHenry, Chicago Morgan Park, Homewood-Flossmoor, Aurora East, Libertyville, Rockford Guilford, Chicago Dunbar.

83-year-old woman bank president washes windows

SANDOVAL, Ill. (AP) — Patrons of the First National Bank in Sandoval pay deference to the 83-year-old woman in bifocals polishing the glass in the front door. They may have to see her about a loan someday.

Behind those spectacles is Mrs. Stella Bellamy.

"Oh, I'm not a women's liber," the tiny gray-haired lady said. "It's just a job that I think women can do if they are called on to do it."

The board of directors appointed her president in '67, as she remembers, by default. Her predecessor had died.

"I'd worked here since 1915," she told an interviewer. "The bank opened in 1910." That's when 18-year-old Miss Stella Power graduated from Sandoval High with a bookkeeping major.

Much has happened in this Southern Illinois community since then. For one thing, it's grown to 1,500 population. And in 1921, Miss Power married Harry Bellamy, a fellow bank employee. He died in 1948. But one thing has remained the same: Mrs. Bellamy has always worked at the bank. She's been bookkeeper, teller, assistant cashier (to her husband), vice president and now is something of an institution in her own right. She admits there was even a time when she worked for free.

In any event, the 10-employee bank has had more than its money's worth. The board didn't bargain for a window-washing executive. But, Mrs

Bellamy said, "It needs to be done. The janitor can't see to do it at night. There's no sense having a glass door if you can't see through it."

Nevertheless, she's learned to delegate other responsibilities. "I let the cashier do all the work," she said. "I just sit here and advise." Having known nearly all the people in town most of their lives, she's particularly handy at judging loan applications. She has a better idea than many bankers of who is a good risk.

Still, she's an easy touch for some. "I give all my little friends in town free suckers," she said. "This has become a custom." And she's always ready to join in civic activities. Her women's church group has found her trustworthy enough to be treasurer.

Naturally she's had run-ins with some tough customers. "We've had three robberies," she said. "One time they came to my house and made my husband come down at night. They tied me up and left me home on the bed." She was having lunch during the second stickup and missed the whole thing.

"The third one, they got him before he got out of town," she said. "I just sat here at my own desk. I was scared but I wrote down his description..."

More rural students in medical schools urged

CHICAGO (AP) — Medical schools should increase their enrollments of students from small towns and rural areas and should offer more training programs for family physicians, says a research team from the University of Missouri.

The result would be more doctors who are likely to practice in rural areas where the shortage of physicians is greatest, the team says in the Feb. 2 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Drs. Sam Cullison, Christopher Reid and Jack M. Colwill base their recommendation on a survey study of graduates of the University of Missouri medical school. They also cite two national studies which they say support their findings.

While 26 per cent of Americans live in nonmetropolitan counties, the doctors note that only 13 per cent of the nation's doctors practice in these counties and their average age is considerably older than that for the nation as a whole.

The doctors write that the problem is growing worse in some areas, with the percentage of doctors dropping faster than the population decline in these areas.

The researchers found that Missouri physicians with nonmetropolitan backgrounds are two to three times as likely to select nonmetropolitan practice as physicians with urban backgrounds.

They also found that those who enter family practice are almost three times as likely to select nonmetropolitan practice as physicians in other primary-care specialties, such as pediatrics and obstetrics-gynecology.

And they found that doctors entering family practice were more likely to come from nonmetropolitan areas.

Ogle Conservation farmer for 1975 named

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT DEVRIES

Robert DeVries, Forreton, was selected the outstanding Conservation Farmer for 1975. Mr. and Mrs. DeVries operate 380 acres of land in Lincoln Township. They own 200 acres and operate the entire acreage on a 50-50 basis with his father. Robert was raised on the home farm which he operates with his father. Robert's father is a dedicated conservationist himself, having been a district cooperator and served as chairman of the district from 1955 to 1956. A conservation plan is followed with many conservation practices being applied. Robert as a tenant, was very instrumental in applying conservation practices on two other rented farms in the community.

Approximately six years ago, Robert and his wife purchased a neighboring 160 acre farm, borrowing most of the required funds from the Farmers Home Administration and retiring the debt in 1975.

The land consists of rolling prairie and timber soil subject to serious erosion. The farming enterprise consists of fattening 400 cattle and marketing of 1200 hogs yearly. Because of the serious erosion problems on the farm an intensive system of conservation practices has been applied, which include contouring, terracing, grass waterway development, crop residue management, pasture improvement and a gully stabilization structure.

Robert became a cooperator of the Ogle County Soil and Water Conservation District when he purchased his farm and now has a Long Term Conservation

Haak elected to board

DENVER, Colo. — Melvin Haak of Polo, was elected to the American Murray Grey Cattle Association Board of Directors at the recent annual meeting during the National Western Stock Show.

Haak and his family are breeders of Murray Grey Cattle, a native beef breed of Australia, and have taken an active role in national breed affairs as well as breed promotion in their own region.

The Murray Grey breed was imported to the United States in the late 1860's where it has now developed into an established beef breed. These cattle are silver-grey in color and have black skin pigmentation, such as Angus cattle. They are noted for ease of calving, yet produce a calf that will weigh comparable to any native U.S. breed or recently imported one.

Haak notes one of the big pluses for breeding Murray Grey cattle is their ability to fatten on feed which other cattle would just barely live on. This important factor enables the Grey cattle to fatten sooner and be marketable several weeks before many other cattle breeds.

Dr. Says: Chest pain not always from heart

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was awakened at 4 a.m. with a terrible pain around my chest. It was like a giant rubber band getting tighter and tighter. Most of the pain was in the center of my chest, just behind the breast bone.

It was very painful and difficult to breathe. I'm not sure how long it lasted. I tried to sleep but kept waking up with the pain still there no matter which way I laid.

About 9 a.m. I called my doctor's office and the nurse just told me to take the pills the doctor gave me and to drink my milk (I was being treated for an ulcer). My chest was sore the rest of the day as if my ribs were bruised.

That was the first time that ever happened and I hope the last and I'd like to know if you think it is serious and if it could happen again.

It was mentioned to me it could have been a heart attack but I'm only 20, a female and not overweight. I don't smoke or drink, not even coffee. However, there is quite a bit of stress in my life as I help raise my younger brother and sister because my mother is alone.

I have always heard that heart attacks were supposed to cause pain in the arm or leg and I don't remember any such pain. I can't afford a doctor unless it is urgent, so I would really appreciate your reply.

DEAR READER — It is most improbable that you had pain from your heart for the very reasons you mention. Young women almost never have heart attacks unless they have high blood pressure, kidney disease, diabetes or some similar underlying medical problem. Unless you were born with some heart defect or had rheumatic heart disease or other diseases that you would likely know about, I think you can forget about the heart as the source of your difficulty.

Heart attacks do cause symptoms similar to what you describe, but heart attacks do not cause pain in the leg. They can, and often do, cause pain in the arm, shoulder and even in the jaw but you do not have to have pain there either with an attack.

What do you have? The most likely explanation is that you had an acute spasm of the esophagus. That will produce the severe pain you describe and be mostly behind the breast bone. It is sometimes difficult to separate from a heart attack. Your comment about being treated for an ulcer makes this even more likely.

Is such an attack serious? Well, it is downright painful at times and I have seen it bring tears to strong men's eyes. I have never seen it damage anyone or cause death or other serious reactions.

Will it recur? It might. People prone to these often have other attacks. Prevention of stomach acidity may help. If you do have other attacks and they are bad or frequent your doctor can give you some medicine that counteracts the tendency to have spasms. Such medicines are also used to prevent nerve stimulation of acid production by the stomach. Stress does aggravate such conditions.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE F-692: Harvey X., aged 38, is a meticulous bachelor.

"But, Dr. Crane," Harvey began, "I met a beautiful daughter of a prominent socialite family a year ago.

"She was only 26, but I fell madly in love with her and for the first time in my life, I proposed marriage.

"We had a fancy wedding and an exciting honeymoon abroad.

"But when we got back to America and settled down, I found myself growing more and more irritated by her.

"For she'd sleep till 10 or 11 a.m. and then loll around the house reading movie magazines or else would go out in the afternoon to a bridge club.

"Well, I was reared with the idea that you should make your life count by performing some constructive service and thus justify your existence down here on this planet Earth.

"Besides, she got on my nerves by her sloppy house-keeping.

"For example, when she finished using a wash cloth at the lavatory, she might let it remain wadded up in a ball and leave it in the basin.

"Or she'd let it hang over the edge and drip water on the bathroom floor.

"Besides, she'd leave her towel hanging sideways on the towel rack.

"Because of my meticulous bachelor life, I'd then straighten out her towel; remove her washcloth from the basin, and even replace her toothbrush in the medicine cabinet.

"Well, I began to scold her about her lack of neatness until she grew angry and we'd have a verbal feud.

"I got so angry one day that I told her she was just a useless drone, contributing nothing to society to justify her existence.

"So she bridled at that and told me I was a finicky old maid.

"Well, we finally split up and got a divorce before our first wedding anniversary had arrived.

"Dr. Crane, I'll admit I am probably a finicky introvert and she was a spoiled extrovert, but I simply cannot stand to see crooked pictures on the wall, or towels hanging unevenly on the rack, or dishes stacked in the sink from several meals back."

Beware Of Bachelors

If a man has gone unmarried till he is past 35, it would be wiser for him to seek a widow for a wife!

For such old bachelors are so set in their ways that it is doubly difficult for a young wife to adapt to their life style.

But a widow has already spent probably five or 10 years helping housebreak her first husband.

She has also learned to compromise and glean enough more of husbandly psychology to be able to tolerate the typical old bachelor traits shown by Harvey.

Besides, old bachelors are likely to be less virile, and passionate, which means they pay more attention to trivial defects in a wife's housekeeping skills.

The virile younger male will ignore many of those things Harvey criticized if his wife serves him adequate boudoir cheesecake and thus bolsters his sex ego.

But a dried up old bachelor is more likely to have a withered libido!

And while the usual wife is not very ardent sexually, she prefers to fight her mate off, instead of always endeavoring to egg him on!

So send for the 200-point "Tests For Husbands And Wives," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of Dixon Evening Telegraph, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs, when you send for one of his booklets).

Roll up your sleeve to save a life...
